I failed the Texas bar exam twice before passing on my third attempt. The first two times I took a bar review course. The third time I studied alone in my apartment kitchen. My first two scores were 637 and 654. My third score was 706. A passing score is 675.In The Bar Exam Is Easy, I share the simple techniques, tricks, tips, and secrets on how to pass the bar exam that I learned studying by myself. Any criticism I have of this book is from someone who passed their first bar exam and read this book two weeks before their second bar exam (for another state). So, my perspective is different from the author's. However, I used the full Kaplan course for my first exam, and then just went through old practice exams for my second exam. I spent somewhere close to 140 hours studying for the first exam. I then spent something like 15-20 hours studying for the next exam. The results were the same. The information in this book is generally very true and valuable. It is most valuable to someone who has not yet taken a bar exam and, preferably, is only recently beginning to study for their first exam. Unfortunately, law schools are full of nervous, uptight people who are convinced that the bar exam is the most important (and difficult) thing they've ever done. It's not. It is, however, important. And I think this is why people are willing to spend $3,000 on a prep course. It gives them piece of mind. I did, and wish I hadnâ™. Although challenging, the bar exam is a test of volume, not particularly of skill. This is an important point that people often fail to understand. ANYONE who can put in the requisite time can generally pass this test. Itâ™s a matter of familiarity with the rules and the ability to apply them to given facts. But studying correctly will cut down on the time necessary to come to a point of proficiency. (Mastering the material is wholly unnecessary, and a waste of time.) The greatest benefit this book provides is by shifting focus away from the Bar Bri and Kaplan et al methods of force-feeding reams upon reams of information down your throat before a test.
