Customer Reviews

There were many things that I just couldn't enjoy about this book, and I feel like a lot of the positive reviews don't consider some of these things as actual problems. First, the writing was good. There were a few typos, and you notice when you see them, but it wasn't anything too terrible. My issue isn't with the writing, but with what was written. Some things were unbelievable while others just left a bad taste in my mouth. (Spoilers ahead:) In the very beginning of the prologue, we meet a twelve-year-old King, who is apparently at school on a playground. A playground with sandboxes. Now, at 12 King should be in middle school, so I don't know what that boy is doing with a recess break, but it left me confused right off the bat. On the one hand, they seem like they should be in elementary school, but then they seem older than they are, and it just left me unimpressed with King's character. I understand that abuse can age a person beyond their years, but that's not what came through to me. Neither King nor Preppy ever managed to endear themselves to me, and I wasn't really complaining when Preppy kicked the bucket. These characters aren't bad boys, angsty and misunderstood--they're bad people. And not just because they're involved in the drug business or because of the parties they attend. They're killers, and I wouldn't put sexual assault or rape past either of them. King flat out says that Preppy enjoys taking a woman even when she says no. And maybe that was meant to scare Doe (not that it did, of course) but that's not something to joke about. It doesn't matter that Doe's body responded to King's for their first few sexual encounters--it's clear that her predominant emotion towards him is fear, and that never stops him.

I hate that King make me cry. I mean King, not King... but this book 'King'. King is a deranged psychopath, a tattoo artist, an ex-convict, a felon and overall a fearsome mofo. Preppy is King's wacko sidekick who fancy bow-tie and suspender. I love his oddball personality, his vulgar and crude mouth and his wacky charm. Doe as in Jane Doe. This poor girl suffered memory lost and can't even find a scrape of food to feed herself. Not sure whether she is lucky or unlucky when she stumble upon King, in all his menacing glory. "I didn't dream about him. Because King wasn't a dream. He was a nightmare." Right from the beginning, I fell for King and Preppy's bromance. When Doe came into the picture and King getting possessive of her, they are like one big messed up family. King is a true anti-hero. He make me shiver not in a good way with his capability for violence. But at the same time make me melt for him when he did something that resemble a normal human. King is a walking contradiction. He seems to be a complex man who is neither good nor evil. He makes you want to hate him and love him at the same time. He evoked all sorts of complicated feelings in me. I wanted to smack him one too many times. Honestly, there is too much wrong with him, but there is an underlying goodness in him too. "I think you are the most stubborn, overbearing, anger inducing, obnoxious, complicated, and beautiful man that has ever lived." I like Doe's sass. She tends to have verbal diarrhea and being blunt at inappropriate moment without looking ridiculous. I can't imagine waking up and not knowing who I am. I understand her dilemma and struggle to preserve the little part of herself.
