Synopsis

Sam does not like going to the dentist, but then, who does? Dr. Murgatroyd, the dentist, explains to the unbudging Sam, who is hiding under the dentist chair, that he has had to treat many a nervous, and peculiar, patient before. There's been a hippo with a toothache; a beaver who just couldn't stop nibbling; and a crocodile with a whole mouthful of surprises! Before you know it, Sam's mouth is open wide, his fear replaced with laughter, and parents and children have been shown a new and humorous approach to dealing with new experiences.

Customer Reviews

Who is afraid of the dentist? Sam definitely is. Even though he gets a sticker and a treat afterwards, that still doesn't make it all right. Dentists are not to be trusted. To get Sam into the chair rather than under it, Dr. Murgatroyd tells Sam of all the unusual patients he has had over the years. Like the goat with false teeth, the crocodile with a mouth full of babies or the whale that was attacked by hammer head sharks. When all the stories are done, so is Sam's check-up. And he gets to take home a special gift. It leaves him guessing rather any of those bizarre stories were actually true.
